A lewd woman is as a fallen tent, and a good one "as snug as a proper tent." There are also many quains and tender love and Gypsy home songs, in which the tent stands for all that shuts harm out and good int while there are certain unwritten and inviolable laws and customs about the tent which are very interesting to observe and stady. The rule is universal preventing Gypsies occupying the tent's inner compartments, save at night or when driven inside by storms, in case of quarrels, involving serious trouble and possible endangering of life, no Gypsy who is defending himself may be pursued within the tent.
